SAMPLE HUMAN RESOURCES POLICY HANDBOOK

Document type: Fictional demonstration policy Version: 1.0

Important notice: This handbook is a fictional sample created for the NivHR demonstration. It is not an actual company policy or legal advice. Before real-world use, it should be reviewed by qualified HR and legal professionals. Applicable law prevails over any conflicting provision.

1. Purpose and Scope

This handbook describes the sample human resources policies of NivTech Solutions, a fictional mid-size technology company based in India. It is a demonstration document created for the NivHR project and is not an actual company policy or legal advice.

These guidelines apply to all full-time employees unless an employment agreement or a written HR communication states otherwise. Where a law applicable in an employee's location provides a more favourable or mandatory entitlement, the applicable law will prevail.

2. Working Hours and Workweek

Normal working hours are 9:30 AM to 6:30 PM, Monday to Friday. Employees are expected to be available during these hours, attend scheduled meetings on time, and coordinate breaks with their teams.

Team leads may approve reasonable schedule adjustments for project needs, accessibility, or personal circumstances. Any regular change to an employee's working schedule should be confirmed with the manager and HR.

3. Annual Leave

Eligible employees receive 18 days of annual leave per leave year. Annual leave is intended for planned vacations and personal commitments.

Employees must submit annual leave requests at least 3 working days before the first requested leave day. Requests should be submitted through the company's leave system and are subject to approval by HR.

A maximum of 10 consecutive working days of annual leave may be taken in a single request. Any exception requires written approval from HR and the employee's department manager before the leave begins.

4. Sick Leave

Eligible employees receive 10 days of sick leave per leave year. Sick leave is intended for illness, injury, medical appointments, and recovery.

Employees should notify their manager as soon as reasonably possible when illness prevents them from working. A sick leave request should be entered in the leave system as soon as the employee is able to do so.

A medical certificate from a registered medical practitioner is required when sick leave exceeds 2 consecutive working days. HR may request supporting documentation where permitted by applicable law and company procedure.

5. Casual Leave

Eligible employees receive 6 days of casual leave per leave year. Casual leave may be used for urgent personal matters or short-notice needs.

Employees should submit casual leave requests at least 1 day before the requested leave date whenever reasonably possible. For an unexpected emergency, the employee must notify their manager as soon as possible and submit the request afterwards.

6. Leave Counting, Balance and Approval

Leave is counted in working days. Saturdays, Sundays, and the company's designated weekly rest days are excluded from leave calculations. Public holidays are handled according to the applicable company holiday calendar.

Unused annual, sick, and casual leave does not carry forward to the next leave year under this sample policy. Unused balances expire at the end of the leave year and are not converted to cash unless required by applicable law or a written company policy.

HR reviews leave applications and may approve or reject a request after considering the employee's available balance, notice requirements, team coverage, and applicable policy. If a request is rejected, HR must provide a reason.

Employees should not treat a submitted or pending request as approved. Leave is approved only after the leave system records an approval decision.

7. Attendance and Punctuality

Employees are expected to record attendance using the method designated by the company and to be ready to begin work at their scheduled start time.

An employee who arrives late 3 times in a calendar month will receive an attendance warning. Repeated lateness may lead to a discussion with the manager and HR and further action under the company's disciplinary process.

If an employee expects to be late or absent, they should inform their manager as early as possible.

8. Work From Home

Employees may work from home for up to 2 days per week with prior manager approval. Approval depends on role requirements, project commitments, information-security obligations, and team coordination.

Employees working remotely must remain reachable during their agreed working hours, protect company information, use approved devices and systems, and attend required online meetings.

9. Notice Period and Separation

The standard notice period for an employee who resigns is 60 calendar days, unless the employment agreement or a written HR-approved arrangement specifies otherwise.

Employees should submit resignation in writing to their manager and HR. HR will coordinate the separation process, including handover responsibilities, return of company property, access closure, and final administrative formalities.

10. Code of Conduct and Information Security

Employees must act professionally, respectfully, and honestly. Harassment, discrimination, bullying, retaliation, fraud, and deliberate misuse of company resources are not acceptable.

Employees must protect confidential business information, personal data, credentials, source code, customer information, and company devices. Passwords and access tokens must not be shared.

Employees must follow applicable security procedures, report suspected security incidents promptly, disclose conflicts of interest, and use company systems primarily for authorised business purposes.

Employees are expected to communicate respectfully, follow reasonable workplace instructions, and raise concerns through their manager or HR.

11. Questions and Policy Administration

Employees who have questions about this handbook should contact HR. HR is responsible for explaining these sample rules and communicating any approved updates.

This fictional handbook is intended for software demonstration and testing. It does not create an employment contract, does not replace statutory requirements, and should be reviewed by qualified HR and legal professionals before any real-world use.
